.Q: Changing the text in a text box when a user clicks on a button I have a textbox that I want to change the text in whenever a user clicks on a button. However, the change in the textbox is not being recognized and the code I have in place doesn't change the textbox. The code is here:
protected void UserName_Command(object sender, CommandEventArgs e) { UserName.Text = ""; Control t = (Control)sender; if (t is TextBox) { TextBox box = (TextBox)t; box.Text =
"New Text"; } } Any help in this matter would be much appreciated. A: this is not done through the button event; if you use that you are refreshing the page after you have changed the text in the textbox. what you want to do is have a hidden element on the page somewhere that updates the textbox; when you want to update the text, get the element, set the text, and then postback the page. something like this:

protected void UserName_Command(object sender, CommandEventArgs e) { UserName.Text = ""; TextBox t = (TextBox)Page.FindControl("TextBoxId"); if (t!= null) t.Text = "New Text"; else
    "UpdateTextBox('TextBoxId')", true); // the next line should not be necessary // but it allows you to change the text from the UI, without a postback. // if you do want a postback to happen, you can remove the true
