Star of David The Star of David (– Šlāḥ Dawid; Latin: Stellae David; Greek: Hstarod) is a Jewish symbol representing the juxtaposition of the elements of the Hebrew letter shin (שׁ). Its four points are, as it were, the four stages of the zodiac: A, B, C and D. The word is derived from the Hebrew term for the constellation of the star David (דָּוִד, Dawid), which is the seventh brightest star in the constellation of Ursa Major and the twelfth brightest star in the night sky. The Hebrew name of the constellation is, a compound of שׁ meaning "firmament" and דָּ, which is the same as the Heb. letter yod (י) pronounced "yud", as in the Hebrew words yadah (יָדָה) for "judgment", and yodâ (יָדַעַ) for "teach". The Hebrew word (שׁ, palamed) means "breast" and has the same meaning as the letter aleph (א). is the name of a constellation in the southern sky (the Greek name is). This constellation is used as a symbol of Judaism or Jewish nationalism, and the image has been used as a symbol of the Jewish people since antiquity. The Star of David, also referred to as the Shield of David, consists of the four elements of the Hebrew letter shin (שׁ). The symbol is distinct from the Star of Promise, which consists of the four elements of the Hebrew letter ayin (ע). Star of David in Israel In Israel, the Star of David is used as a symbol of the State of Israel and of its Jewish citizens. It is sometimes used as a symbol of the Nation of Israel, sometimes as an emblem of both the State of Israel and the Jewish people (referring to the biblical promise of the land to the Jews), sometimes as a symbol of both the Jewish and the State of Israel. The small arms of the Israel Defense Forces use a Star of David as their emblem. The State of Israel grants citizenship to anyone who is Jewish, by way of ancestry and religious belief. This is to ensure that there is no mixture of ethnic groups in the country. The motto of the state, which has been
