Johann Gottfried K lzew (9 May 1665 in K tzenorf, Silesia - 25 February 1747 in Berlin) was a German composer and music teacher. Life

Johann Gottfried K lzew was born in K tzenorf, Silesia (then a crown land of the Holy Roman Empire) as the third child of Andreas K lzew and his wife, Katharina "Kittilin". He was a choirboy at the Benedictine St. Anne's monastery in K nigsberg and studied piano, organ and composition there with Johannes Weigel. In 1683, he moved to Regensburg to study with Johann Caspar Kerll and moved again, a few years later, to become an organist in the St. Mauritius church in Berlin. He was a member of the Nikolaikirche and, in 1691, was appointed organist of the Nikolaikirche in Berlin. He made acquaintance with Georg Philipp Telemann, who had become famous after his appointment as organist at the Burgtheater in Hamburg. While in Hamburg, he composed a string quintet. Telemann and K lzew became friends and Telemann, while also supporting K lzew's later move to Berlin, urged him to stay in Hamburg. In Berlin, he composed several dances for small ensembles and several operas, as well as some solo songs. He died in Berlin in 1747 and was buried in the cemetery of the church of St. Mary's of Bethlehem. Works

Among his works are the following: 12 movements from Telemann's string quintet Adagio (movement) and (movement) in a trio of strings
