C.B. Sachdeva (Author).I think I mentioned a while back that our team was making a really cool kitchen island set that I wanted to show off. Today I am finally able to share it with you guys. We just couldn't wait to get it done and actually give it a test fit, so we sprung it on the crew this weekend and took a quick trip to the upholstery shop to get it installed. I should point out that we are getting pretty creative with the kitchen design. It's a kitchen that pretty much embodies our design concept and is very customized for our lifestyle. We are doing all this without a formal kitchen design plan, or even a general style statement. We are getting it all together on a pretty tight schedule and I guess I am learning something each day. As you can see from the pics below, we are using a very clean cream colored base cabinet and backsplash with the stainless steel trim and accents. We are going with a glass-front for a substantial kitchen island for food prep and general glass-to-hand contact. This is one of my favorite things about working with my husband - it's so easy to make him laugh! He has the best responses to questions I ask. We didn't want to stray from the stainless lines and clean feel in the rest of the design, so for the kitchen cabinets, we have made them use a metallic black that is very similar to the finish on the hardware we have been using. The design touches we included are keeping with our color scheme and giving us a ton of storage and counter space, as well as natural light. We have a lot of nooks and spaces around the island for storing smaller appliances and cooking items, as well as food prep and serving. We are using a lot of glass where we can because it is all one glass surface. Not only is it just a really great design that we are both enjoying 2d92cc491b
