Category: Transport in South Tyrol [Molecular regulation of podocyte function: new targets in the treatment of glomerular diseases]. Podocyte foot processes constitute the filtration barrier of the glomerular capillaries. A highly specialised and essential function, this barrier is responsible for the homeostasis of the glomerular filtrate. It is by now well established that mutations in genes that lead to podocyte dysfunction result in proteinuria and glomerulosclerosis, but the molecular pathways regulating podocyte function are not well understood. Recent research has highlighted the importance of
