Chapter 7. File Formats and Version Control

In this chapter, we'll explore the wide range of file formats used by software developers, their uses, and their differences, followed by discussing the practice of version control. By the end of the chapter, you'll have a good understanding of the differences between the various file formats and how version control can help you avoid not only project disasters, but also conflicts caused by inadvertently overwriting or moving the wrong files! # File Formats and Useful Plug-ins When you use a software package that supports image manipulation, it's beneficial to know about the different file formats your software uses. For example, when you export a picture from Photoshop, you're selecting which file format you want to export your image in. Most image editing software works with Portable Document Format (`_.pdf_`) files as well as other image formats. However, not every tool or software package supports every format. In this section, we'll give you a brief overview of the most popular image file formats and the tools that support those formats. ## JPG Probably the most popular image file format in the world today is JPEG (the Joint Photographic Experts Group) file format. JPEG uses DCT (discrete cosine transform) compression, allowing it to produce an efficient file size for most images. JPEG is a still-image file format that looks really good, but is generally used for storing photographic images. JPG images are compressed using 256 x 256 pixel blocks of Fabian Delph scooped the prestigious young player of the year award at the FA Cup on Tuesday night. The 23-year-old's mesmerising solo effort in the 4-2 win over Millwall sealed the award for the central midfielder. Delph's header in the first half levelled up a first-half City scoreline that included goals from Raheem Sterling, Pablo Zabaleta and a hat-trick from Sergio Agüero. And Delph, who had his fourth cup goal this season on the night, was named young player of the year by the Football Association. "It was a nice, entertaining win tonight, regardless of how we're going to play next season," said Delph in his post-match interview. "That was something to be good memories to have. Obviously it's a fantastic trophy, to win it at Millwall was massive for the lads, the fans were brilliant throughout the whole game and I've got great memories of it. "I had no idea when I came in the dressing room, it was unbelievable what was going on. You know it's a fantastic trophy and to win it at Millwall, it's

"We had a good watch through of the Juventus game, so you can see them were a good team, they played well. "I think once we got back to the dressing room a lot of the lads started to get back into their stride as well, so it was nice to be back out there. "It was a good win. I don't think anyone expected us to win, they were a good side, but we were on top and we deserved to win. "It was a good game, a good experience, was nice to get
